Market Oriented Editorial Concept

- Quality Securing and Control
- Service Orientation
- Feedback for the reader
Service Orientation

- "news you can use"
- differentiation of editorial content
- move from more "hard" themes to "softer" news
- more orientation for busy readers
- shorter, more colourful articles with explanatory charts
- more emphasis on target groups like women, youth, ethnic minorities
- more colour in the newspaper
- special sections with more detailed (background) information published once a week
- underlining of current events: electronic media might be quicker
Feedback for the Reader

- systematic reader and market research
- activities which bridge the difference between the reader and the editorial staff
- careful and continuous evaluation of reader response
- personal subscriber care

Quality Securing and Control

- corrections columns
- writing coaches

Requirements for Integrated Marketing

- willingness to accept the market as the driving force and to adapt to market/reader changes
- establish a climate of creativity through job enrichment, job rotation, creativity meetings
- new forms of editorial work: substitute departmental thinking through process thinking, outsourcing of special interest reports etc.
