The National Library Board (NLB) is pleased to publish Singapore Literature in English: An Annotated Bibliography with the Centre for Liberal Arts and Social Sciences, Nanyang Technological University (NTU). Compiled by Professor Koh Tai Ann of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences, NTU, this bibliography is the first annotated bibliography on Singapore Literature in English, and is also the most complete to date.

The National Library has supported the development of the literary arts in Singapore over the years through our collections, publications and programmes. In 1976, the Library published its first bibliography on creative writing in English. Since then, bibliographies on local creative writing have been published in 1982, 1986, 1991 and 1994. Thus it is timely that information about writers and works have been brought up-to-date in this new publication. The additions reflect the variety and quality of Singapore Literature in English which have emerged in the last 14 years. It also reflects the growth in the Library’s collection, especially in the area of unpublished manuscripts. As part of the Library’s endeavour to preserve and make accessible our literary heritage, we welcome donations of Singapore literary works from individuals and organisations.

Singapore Literature in English forms an indispensable part of our culture and identity. Whether writing on public or private themes, the stories, poems and plays give expression to the nation’s and individual’s consciousness, imagination and experience. They enrich our lives by engaging and challenging us with the issues that they present, and by delighting and stirring us with the power and beauty of language and expressions.

I wish to thank Professor Koh for taking on the momentous task of putting this bibliography together, and for sharing her knowledge on the subject through this publication. My thanks also extends to the Centre for Liberal Arts and Social Sciences, NTU, for co-publishing this bibliography with us, and to the staff of National Library Singapore for their contributions towards this publication and the ensuing symposium “Seeking an Audience: Singapore Literature in English”.

We hope this publication will benefit researchers and the general public interested in Singapore Literature, as well as encourage many more to read and develop an appreciation of our literature.

Dr. N. Varaprasad
Chief Executive
National Library Board Singapore
This is the first annotated and most comprehensive bibliography to date of the entire body of “Singapore Literature in English” – what previous bibliographies used to describe modestly as “Singapore Creative Writing”, which suggests a body of writing by new or apprentice writers still developing their craft and which literary-critical opinion was not ready to regard as “Literature”. Since the last bibliography thus titled – the National Library’s Celebrations: Singapore Creative Writing in English (1994), compiled by Gene Tan – the term, “creative writing” of Singapore has become no longer an adequate and is even possibly, a misleading description. It is a term now more usually associated with writing competitions, workshops or a medium used in educational institutions to foster language learning and/or self-expression. Moreover, tertiary institutions are also following the long-established American practice of offering creative writing courses as part of the subject, English Literature, or as a subject in its own right where instead of studying Literature, students produce their own “creative writing”. Since the compilation of the first bibliographies (by the National Library and the then University of Singapore, both coincidentally in 1976) a substantial core of writing in English has steadily grown in quantity and developed in tandem with its maturing creators and the emergence of new talent. In literary achievement such work undoubtedly qualifies as “Literature”, and courses featuring the works of Singapore writers in English have become not only commonplace in the curriculum of local university English Literature departments, but of universities elsewhere, studied as one of the “Literatures in English” or as post-colonial texts. Although literary canons are contestable and no longer in fashion, canon-formation covertly goes on none the less. A literary canon of Singapore writers in English is already discernible based on reputations established by favourable reviews, inclusion of their work in anthologies, periodicals, school and university curricula both locally and abroad, study of their work in academic articles and books, invited participation in national and international literary festivals, media attention and so on.

Title and Scope of the Annotated Bibliography

But this is a comprehensive bibliography and is thereby not select (in the sense of selecting only “the best” and by implication, exclusion of all other titles which do not qualify as “Literature”). When a former colleague heard that I was working on the bibliography he thought ‘it would certainly help fill in a lot of gaps’ but added that his ‘impression is that much of the literature was not of lasting interest.’ This bibliography does indeed ‘fill in a lot of gaps’ and attempts much more besides; but it makes no literary or such judgements, leaving that to readers, time and posterity. The “Literature” in the bibliography’s title therefore also means literature in the generic sense of imaginative writing expressed in any of the main literary forms. It thus includes all the novels, short stories, poems and plays in English that have been published...
(including some unpublished typescripts) by Singaporean writers, and the anthologies, periodicals and even electronic journals and miscellaneous publications in which some of these works have appeared and may be found. Comprehensiveness, of course, is the aim, but this does not entail a claim to be definitive and complete: there will be the inevitable inadvertent omissions which it is hoped users of the bibliography will draw to the attention of the compiler. Being comprehensive, it includes as well “creative writing” by many a beginner and apprentice writer, especially students. Such writing is most often to be found in the Anthologies section, the collected results of creative writing or literary competitions, workshops and the increasing number of mentored writing programmes for aspiring young writers. Significantly, in such anthologies will be found the “creative writing” of fledgling poets who have since gone on to publish their own collections such as Angeline Yap, Toh Hsien Min, Alfian Sa’at and others – just as the work of the previous generation had first appeared in anthologies and periodicals from the 1950s to the 1970s.

What and Who is the Annotated Bibliography for?

This annotated bibliography is meant to be a handy reference work which, despite the convenience of the Internet as a resource today, provides bibliographical and other information that has been identified, sorted, classified, and annotated. It is the product of informed research and personal knowledge which I hope is relevant, reliable, and useful to those unfamiliar with the literature and may provide ideas for further study and research to those who know it well. Designed for anyone interested in Singapore literature in English for whatever purpose and wants to find out what has been published in what literary form, by whom, when, where it can be found, and other relevant information about a writer or his/her work, it also indicates the work’s availability in the sense, too, of where it is physically located and can be accessed – mostly in the National Library, but also in some cases, in other local institutional libraries.

I envisage users therefore to range from members of the reading public curious about the literature, wanting to know what and how much has been published in any of the literary forms, or simply looking up the works of an author, identifying a title or a Singaporean work to read; students of all levels from school to university; teachers and lecturers designing curricula or selecting texts for courses; librarians building special collections of Singaporean titles or collections which include Singaporean works – to academics and researchers such as the literary scholar; the cultural historian; the sociologist and others who might find some of the more detailed annotations useful for their research. I hope it attracts more readers to these works (who knows what might spark off an interest!), stimulates study of and an interest in aspects of these works such as the cultural, and inspires research in the field that will enable a deeper and broader understanding of the works as such and generally – both their intrinsic qualities and the extent to which they reflect and enable us to better understand Singaporean culture in the broadest sense of the term. For instance, the numerous volumes of ghost stories with their many editions and record numbers of reprints (yet are also most likely to be recorded in the Library's Catalogue as missing) and the many collections and anthologies of short stories must tell us something about Singaporeans. Many of the ghost stories make gripping reading not merely because of their content, but because the writers in quite a few cases know how to tell a story, and more “serious” short story writers might learn a thing or two from these tales. Collectively, the items in this bibliography could even be said to comprise a literary history and express a Singaporean identity.

Criteria for Inclusion of Authors and Works

This Introduction, unlike the one I wrote for Celebrations: Singapore Creative Writing in English, is more of a compiler's introduction and less that of a literary critic and historian. Most of the literary issues entailed in such an enterprise have been brought up there. But one difference between Celebrations and this bibliography is evident from my comment then – that “the loaded terms, “literature” and “creative” may have to give way to the neutral and more inclusive term, “writing,” (p.vii) This was because that bibliography, like its predecessors, included non-fictional writing such as biographies, autobiographies and others like David Brazil's No Money, No Honey, “Literary History and Criticism” and children's literature. This bibliography of Singapore Literature in English departs from that tradition and is therefore less broadly inclusive but still comprehensive in terms of the titles found here. It is moreover, the first not only to be co-published by the Centre of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences of Nanyang Technological University with the National Library Singapore but is compiled and edited by an academic who has researched, written about and taught the literature, and not compiled by a librarian alone.

Authors Included in the Bibliography are those who are Singaporean by birth and citizenship or permanent residence (as far as could be ascertained). However, given Singapore's several transformations as a political entity and the changing or changed citizenship status of individuals (the latter of which the compiler can't determine in every case), I have tended to err on the side of inclusion. In doubtful cases when a pseudonym is suspected or no information about the author is readily available, but the setting of the work – if fiction – is Singapore, the author is included. A decision that had to be made was whether to include the so-called 'diasporic' authors who were born in Singapore, but have emigrated or settled elsewhere. I have excluded those who have been identified since as Asian-Canadian, Asian-Australian, or Southeast Asian-American writers and so on, than Singaporean writers (eg, respectively, Lydia Kwa, Simone Lazaroo and Fiona Cheong) although they may have drawn upon their Singaporean experience and/or set their fiction in Singapore. Exceptions were made with regard to those who were established Singaporean writers with a considerable body of published work (such as Goh Poh Seng) before they emigrated; who were considered to be Singaporean when they wrote and/or published their early or first work (eg, Wong May, Ming Cher); whose books are also published in Singapore and who have retained their literary ties here and received Singaporean literary awards (eg. Mingfong Ho). More arbitrarily perhaps, I have included someone like Lau Siew Mei who, having emigrated to Australia in 1994 in her mid-twenties, seems to me to have retained a Singaporean sensibility (a subjective conclusion, undoubtedly). Her first and only novel to date, Playing Madame Mao, was mainly inspired by the political events of Singapore in the late 1980s before she left Singapore in 1994. Published six years later, it has been hailed by the Singaporean novelist Hwee Hwee Tan as ‘one of the best novels ever written about Singapore’ and was short listed for a number of Australian literary awards. Another is the playwright Chay Yew whose first play was commissioned by and staged in Singapore by TheatreWorks and who has gone on to become an award-winning “Asian-American” playwright, but has retained a working relationship with TheatreWorks.

Works Included or Excluded: the approach here is non-prescriptive. As long as a publication is (or contains) imaginative or “creative” writing which formally comes under one of the literary genres included in this bibliography – the novel, short story, poem or play – it is included. No other literary criteria were used. Works such as the following are excluded although they were found in previous bibliographies on Singapore “creative writing”, perhaps because the body of writing previously in existence was much smaller. (Thus if only “creative writing” was included in the National Library’s first ever bibliography Creative Writing in Singapore (1976) it would only be six and a half pages long, just under half its length.)

a) Literary essays and criticism, as there is already a compilation, a Select Bibliography of Critical Writings, by Tim Yap Fuan (Singapore: National University of Singapore Library, 2000).

b) Non-fiction like biographies and autobiographies. But a work such as Catherine Lim’s Unhurried Thoughts at my Funeral which is self-described as ‘part-autobiography, part-fiction and part-polemics’ is included because it is admittedly ‘part-fiction’ and most of the “chapters” are mainly short stories, albeit linked thematically by the occasion.

c) Children’s books for the very young and ‘school kids’, as the National Library has come out with Singapore Children’s Literature: an Annotated Bibliography (2005). However, so-called “young people’s fiction” for adolescents and teenagers is included. Among these are Minfong Ho’s novels such as Sing to the Dawn, The Clay Marble and others; Adrian Tan’s The Teenage Textbook and its sequel, The Teenage Workbook; and the novels of Low Kay Hwa, which are written with this readership in mind. An exception would be made if the fictional work – even if written for ‘school kids’ – was by an author who is not otherwise known for being a children’s author as inclusion of such titles will give readers a better idea of the author’s body of work to date. Thus I have included The Call from Crying House and its sequel, The Woman in the Last Carriage by the poet, Felix Cheong.
d) Humour or writings that intend to be merely funny and are anecdotal, producing laughter as such without conscious literary intention – such as Kitchi Boy’s Oh No, it’s the Kitchi Boy Gang! or Paik Choo’s Goondu books and The Pick of Paik-Choo.

e) Works in English translation, as this is a bibliography of the literature originally written in English.

More detailed information about the individual sections of the Bibliography and annotations are to be found in the compiler’s Explanatory Notes following the Introduction.

Readers wishing to keep up-to-date with works published after 2007 are recommended to consult the “Annual Bibliography of Commonwealth Literature” published by the Journal of Commonwealth Literature. The bibliography for Malaysia and Singapore (1990-1993) was introduced and compiled by Koh Tai Ann, for Singapore (1994-1996) by Koh Tai Ann and Ismail Talib, and since then, Ismail Talib has faithfully maintained it. Published annually, it is both broader in coverage, including not only poetry, fiction and drama, and anthologies (as this bibliography does) but also research aids, translations, criticism, and non-fiction.

Origin of the Annotated Bibliography

I’ve always had an interest in facilitating the study of and research into Singapore writing in English (and its historical companion, Malaysian writing in English) and know well that in a new or unfamiliar field, there’s nothing comparable to a reliable bibliography as a reference guide. When my first article on the subject, “Singapore Writing in English: The Literary Tradition and Cultural Identity” was published in Essays on Literature and Society in Southeast Asia (1981) I had to provide an accompanying Select Bibliography of the writing, my first compilation. In commissioned articles published elsewhere, the writing being then still new and developing, I found myself similarly having to provide up to date bibliographies (sometimes specialized, such as women’s writing) for the information of readers unfamiliar with the literature.

In the late 1980s when co-teaching a course on Singapore writing in English at the National University of Singapore, I offered to work with Miss Manijeh Namazie to update her unpublished pioneering, selectively annotated A Preliminary Bibliography of Imaginative Literature in English of Singapore and Malaysia (1970) which included works set in the region by both Singaporean and expatriate writers. But my leaving NUS for NTU in 1994 to be Dean of Arts at the National Institute of Education and loss of the sabbatical that should have seen the completion of the up-dated annotated bibliography, and her retirement soon after, put the project on hold. Meanwhile, I’d noticed that for many years, Singapore writing was not represented in the “Annual Bibliography of Commonwealth Literature” published by the leading journal in the field, The Journal of Commonwealth Literature and took the initiative to fill the long seven-year gap left by the Malaysian compilers since 1990. The next step was to de-link Singapore from Malaysia, roping in Ismail Talib who has admirably since, ensured the provision of bibliographic information about Singapore Literature in English and English translation to both the local and international community.

A research grant from Nanyang Technological University subsequently enabled me to revive the original annotated bibliography project, engage research assistants to continue identifying and checking titles and entering the relevant data for the bibliography. After 12 years in university administration, I was able to resume work on the bibliography last year upon returning to academia. It then struck me that Celebrations, the last bibliography of Singapore Creative Writing in English to which I had coincidentally provided the Introduction had appeared 14 years ago. The staff of the National Library Singapore with support from Dr. N. Varaprasad, Chief Executive of the National Library Board (NLB) agreed to work with me to update the Singapore portion of my bibliographic database of Singapore titles from 2004 when I'd last worked on it. The bibliography now contains over a thousand entries (including some duplicated titles which are different editions of the same work).

Compiling and annotating a bibliography like this means hours of painstaking work and meticulous attention to detail, tracking and recording relevant titles, many titles having to be checked physically for identification purposes as library catalogues and existing bibliographies are not always accurate and may even be misleading. During updating of the latter, information about, identification and annotation of relevant titles published since must be done by browsing among library stacks, in book shops (especially for self-published titles), reading book reviews, publishers’ catalogues, and so on. It was the annotation that was the most time-consuming: every doubtful or new title had to be physically looked at and checked. Frequent interruptions by the demands of my various Deanships and inevitable changes in research assistants over the years also meant some confusion and duplication. Most recently, the migration of data from one software to another entailed time-consuming, anxious replacement of missing abstracts and duplication of effort. It is hoped that these problems have been remedied and that as few errors and omissions as possible remain undetected. To enable users to note down immediately any errors, omissions and comments they would like to convey to the compiler and the library, two blank pages have been provided at the back of the Bibliography, while an address is provided at the front of the Bibliography.

Acknowledgements

A project like this would not have been possible without invaluable assistance and support of one kind or another. To begin with, I am grateful to Choy Fatt Cheong, currently University Librarian at NTU for getting the bibliographic project back on track when he gave me the idea of migrating my data from an outmoded system to the superior data management and bibliographic software ProCite and facilitated the process with the help of his students when he was at Temasek Polytechnic. Nanyang Technological University through the National Institute of Education provided me with a research grant which enabled me to hire much-needed research assistants and buy the software to store and organize data. Research assistants do much of the entering of data and poring over books in libraries for checking and annotation and thus I should like to thank my research assistants Ho Shu Ping and Keith Tan Li Ming who assisted me up to 2004, and Evangeline Yeo since 2007 with both the Singaporean and expatriate-authored titles. But above all, the completion and publication of this particular bibliography would not have been possible without the diligence, professionalism and conscientious commitment of Gracie Lee Siew Kheng to the project with assistance from her colleagues at the National Library Singapore, Ivy Lee, Sharon Teng, Hajarah Banu Kuthibutheen, Timothy Pwee, Ramlah Hashim and facilitation by Noryati A. Samad, Assistant Director of the National Library Singapore and Gene Tan, Deputy Director of Programmes & Exhibitions, National Library Board. During these past few months, Gracie Lee especially managed the various practical aspects of the project such as seeing to the updating of the entries, annotation and physical checks of titles in the Library, the inclusion of Call Nos. for every title that is in the National Library, the index and assisting me with preparation of the bibliography for printing. However as compiler and editor, I am solely responsible for the design, scope and other aspects of the bibliography and therefore any errors and omissions still remaining or other flaws in the bibliography.

I am grateful also to the National Library Singapore for the publication of this bibliography and NTU's Centre for Liberal Arts and Social Sciences for co-publishing it. In this respect, I wish to thank Dr. N.Varaprasad, CE of NLB, Prof Lawrence Wong, Chair of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences and Dean of the College of Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences, and Assoc. Prof. Neil Murphy, Head of the English Division at Nanyang Technological University (NTU) for their support of both this project and the Symposium, “Seeking an Audience: Singapore Literature in English”, at which the bibliography will be launched. To Gene Tan, too, is owed the idea of the launching of the bibliography and organization of an event round it and for co-convening with me under the joint auspices of the National Library Singapore and the NTU Centre for Liberal Arts and Social Sciences, the resultant Symposium.

Novels. Some information about each novel is provided under “Abstracts” to give the reader an idea about its content but without giving the plot away. As it is impossible, even with research assistants, to read every novel, the information (if adequate) was abstracted from the “publisher’s blurb” found on almost all back covers or jackets of novels. It is not uncommon for authors to provide such information for the back cover. The informative parts were retained and the element of “blurb” reduced or omitted through judicious editing. Some Abstracts may consist of excerpts from the websites of booksellers like Select Books and Amazon and the novel’s publisher or from book reviews and so on, if these were found to be more informative or accessible. When no acknowledged source is provided, the Abstract either originated from one of the research assistants’ or the compiler’s own knowledge of the novel. For lack of time (each book having to be checked out for its contents to be abstracted, and an alternative source found if the information on the back cover is inadequate or the book is unavailable) not every novel is provided with an abstract – but most are.

Short Stories. This is the most popular form, the most numerous and widely published in terms of individual collections, anthologies, periodicals and series. As a service to readers and researchers who might wish to track them, the authors and titles of short stories found in anthologies and periodicals as well as the titles of short stories found in the author's own collection are itemized under “Contents.” The short story section is also swollen by the potentially controversial inclusion of the many and hugely popular collections of ghost stories which it seems to me really cannot be ignored. These are in the Bibliography partly because they are short stories in form; partly because the ghost stories reflect the varied purposes the form could be made to serve as the authors range from an established writer like Catherine Lim, the academic K.K. Seet and the late short story writer Goh Sin Tub, to the pseudonymous, punning “Russell Lee” with his “Team of Ghost Writers” and Pugalenthi, Sr. whose output almost rivals that of Lee. Another reason for including them is that they reflect what the fiction-reading public has been most avidly interested in reading during the past two decades since 1989 when Lee’s first collection was the unexpected best seller at the Singapore Book Fair.
Drama. While plays are included because scripts are published, collected, anthologized and often studied as literary texts, they were essentially written to be staged or performed. Thus some – perhaps, many – plays staged in Singapore are not published, but exist in typescript, if at all. As the National Library has a collection of catalogued copies of the typescripts donated by the playwrights or theatre groups (sometimes with production notes) or which began life as entries to a competition and were subsequently deposited with the Library, and may or may not have been staged, these are also listed. Inclusion is meant to alert both readers and researchers to their existence. The dates when the plays were staged, directors, cast members and venues are also recorded in the Notes to each entry, whenever the information can be found at hand from the publication itself or from programme notes or other sources. But the documentation and information is not comprehensive, complete or consistent and more research needs to be done for the record.

Anthologies. This section contains anthologies of literary works or “creative writing” by Singaporeans compiled, edited and published locally, as well as anthologies which include Singaporean works but were compiled, edited and published abroad. Others (usually anthologies from the 1950s to early 1970s) may be compilations of both Singapore and Malaysian writing because Singapore was once considered part of Malaya and then Malaysia, and the writing in English was thus historically linked. (eg, Thumboo’s The Second Tongue: an Anthology of Poetry from Malaysia and Singapore, 1976.)

Miscellaneous. This section contains a unique, otherwise unclassifiable form of publication – the ephemeral printed programmes of public readings and performances by poets and others. The earlier ones are thin, stapled booklets containing typed copies of the poems read on the occasion. Neither the National Library nor the NUS Central Library have complete holdings of all of these. However, as I own copies and know of their existence and was even present at some of these events, I have included them for their historic value because among other things, the poems read (and such occasions helped to make their work better known) were those by then emerging and young unpublished writers such as Arthur Yap, Lee Tzu Pheng, Robert Yeo and others alongside that of established authors such as D.J. Enright and the young Paul Theroux, who was to become more famous as fiction and travel writer. It is not certain if other such publications exist that are not entered here.
Periodicals. These are magazines or journals published in Singapore and abroad from the time when it was part of the Straits Settlements to the present – from the earliest The Straits Chinese Magazine (1897) which also published fiction in English to the latest literary magazine to appear to date, the NUS Literary Society’s Argot (2008), and which meet at least one of the following criteria:

a) Main or only aim is to publish creative writing (eg, Poetry Singapore).

b) Publishes creative writing, even if that is not the journal’s main focus (eg, Commentary; New Directions), and even if subsequently (with change in editorial policy), such writing is not usually or no longer published.

c) Has one of the above characteristics, but appeared – or had intended to appear – periodically even if it ceased publication after only one or a few issues. (eg, Impression; Poetry Singapore; Hardpressed).

Foreign periodicals are listed if they

a) published or will still publish Singapore creative writing – eg, Tenggara and Southeast Asian Review of English (Malaysia);

b) published special issues which feature the work of Singaporean writers. (eg, the Australian journal, Westerly). Only that special issue is entered.

Library holdings of some important journals are fragmented and we hope that with the information provided here, readers who possess the missing issues will donate them to fill the gaps in the library’s holdings.

Electronic Journals. Singapore never had and to date still does not have a nationally or internationally established print literary journal or review devoted to literature, literary criticism and reviews, let alone one devoted only to Singapore literature in English. The occasional valiant attempts to produce such a journal (eg, Impression, Hardpressed; Focus) were either unsustainable or not sustained. But in recent years, young writers and literary critics taking advantage of the relatively cheaper medium of the Internet, have founded and maintained e-journals to fill this void. Even if, like their print predecessors they are potentially transient (indeed, some could no longer be found and some are no longer current) they, no less than the print journals, merit entry in the Bibliography. It is quite possible that this is not a complete list as it is only what I could find or was informed about. Indeed, by the time this Bibliography appears or not long after, this section might well have become dated.
Unpublished items. These are usually typescripts, play scripts, manuscripts and writers’ drafts, and even an occasional writer’s “portfolio.” They were either donated by the authors to the National Library, or were the winning entries of the National Short Story competition held in the 1980s and short listed Singapore Literature Prize entries. Although not publications proper, they are included in the Bibliography partly to alert readers and researchers to their existence – that they are catalogued and available in the National Library – and partly because quite a few were eventually published; some of the competition winners have eventually established themselves as well-known authors; and the unpublished items could be of interest to researchers and literary historians. Readers who possess such items of historic and literary significance might wish to donate copies to the Library.

Repeated entries and changes in titles. As more popular titles tend to be either reprinted or re-issued in new editions or both, a title re-issued as a revised new edition or under a different imprint will be entered more than once in the bibliography to alert the reader. But each entry will have a note alerting the reader to its year of first publication, and whether it is a first, a revised edition or an edition that has been re-issued later under a different imprint. Revised or new editions under different titles are also noted including changes in content, if any. Mere reprints of an edition are not entered.

Authors’ names. What is entered in each section is the author’s name as it appears on the cover of the book concerned or the name by which the author is known as a writer. In such cases, the author's personal or full name will follow within square brackets (eg, Kon, S. [Stella] and Woon, Walter C. M. [Cheong Ming]). However, as Chinese surnames appear first, and in the West, surnames appear last, and it is not always clear when rendered into English which is the surname, the author is listed alphabetically by surname while the name which appears on the book cover is given within square brackets (eg, Ho, Minfong [Minfong Ho]; Tan, Hwee Hwee [Hwee Hwee Tan]) and Yew, Chay [Chay Yew]). But when an author omits his surname altogether, he is listed according to the first letter of the name on the book cover (eg, Yen Chung [Chong, Yen Chung]). A note will inform the reader (if the information is available) whether the author also writes under another name or pseudonym (eg, ’Joash Moo also writes under the name, Moo Zun Yong’ or Z.Y. Moo).

Cut-off date. The cut-off date for this Bibliography is December, 2007. As publication was scheduled for September, 2008, so as to appear in time for its launch in connection with a symposium on Singapore Literature in English on 7th November, 2008, it was decided to leave out titles published in 2008. A cut-off date coinciding with the end of the previous year is thus neater and provides an exact time-frame for the compiler, the reader, as well as the compiler of the next edition of the Bibliography. None the less, it is not unlikely that some books published in late 2007 or even before may not have come to the attention of the compiler and thus still may have been missed. An exception to the cut-off date has been made in the case of the NUS Literary Society's new biennial periodical Argot which was announced in 2007, but the first and second issues appeared in May and August, 2008. I thought it important for readers to know that while its predecessor, Focus, one of Singapore’s longest-surviving little literary magazines had become defunct, it now has a successor.

Author biographies. Although it is not obligatory or usual to provide biographical information about the authors in a bibliography, Celebrations; Singapore Creative Writing in English: a Bibliography (1994) had provided this and created a useful precedent, which I’ve decided to follow as a service to readers. While Celebrations managed to obtain the biographical details of many, albeit not of all writers – from the latter and their publishers – and provided the information alongside the list of an author’s respective works, the advent of the Internet since then means there now exist some Singaporean sites where such biographical information can be found. I have therefore, at the back of the Bibliography, identified four such sites and a list of authors whose bio-data appear on them. But since these databases are either select or still in the process of being built, readers may have to seek elsewhere on the internet or other sources such as the publishers’ and book sellers’ websites for information about those authors not found in these four selected sites.

Annotations: Notes, Abstracts, Contents, Call Nos. and Location.

Each entry, besides the standard bibliographical information about author, title, imprint, year of publication, pagination, and so on, is annotated to provide other significant information as follows:

Notes: Provides general information about the item either found in the publication or known to the compiler – about the cover illustration, identification of painting on it and artist, cover or book designer; existence of a Foreword, Preface or Introduction and provided by whom; contains a glossary; literary award(s) won; whether this is the first published edition or a re-issue, a revised edition, etc. In the Periodicals section, the Notes provide information about library holdings, indicating where the gaps are, the journal’s publishing history, its predecessor and successor journals, if any, and so on. In the Drama section, the Notes additionally provide information (if known) about the staging or performance of the play.

Abstracts: This has to do with the content of the item. Usually found in the Novels section, providing a brief description or summary of the story or content to give the reader an idea of what the novel or publication may be about and sometimes what kind of novel to expect (eg. a thriller, detective novel, romance, young people’s novel, etc.) In the Periodicals section, the Abstract describes or quotes the aims and scope, manifesto and other declaration of objectives which indicate what the focus and content of the journal might be.
Contents: In the Short Stories section, this itemizes all the titles to be found in individual collections and in the Drama section, titles of plays. In the Anthologies and Periodicals sections both the authors and titles of short stories whose works appear in the publication are itemized, but because of the sheer number of their poems, only names of the poets are listed.

Call No., Holdings and Location: Lastly, almost all the titles are available in the National Library (NL), it being a statutory requirement for Singapore publishers to deposit two copies of every publication with the National Library Board, and the Library's Call No. for each title is thus provided. In those few instances when NL has no holdings of a title, readers are directed to another local library which has the title – even to the University of Malaya library, in some instances. However, some titles are not held in any local library, but are listed here if their existence is known to the compiler and they are available for inspection. It is hoped that such items eventually will be acquired by or donated to NL.

Abstract: 'Tale of a man who, on his birthday, is able to reflect on the past sixty years of his life with nothing short of complete satisfaction. Enumerating all the factors which have made his existence the very picture of wealth, happiness and success - good health and appetite, a harmonious marriage, a thriving business, filial sons, the respect and admiration of his colleagues, and even an adoring mistress - the old man, in a moment of lucid and profound self-awakening, is irresistibly drawn towards the only decision a man of his enviable position can make: he must run away. A comic fable about the paradoxical and elusive nature of life, happiness and the meaning of fulfillment, Dance With White Clouds explores our hero’s desires for self-realization as he attempts to remake his life, only to find, again and again, a constant discontent with the idea of contentment itself.' Abstract: Set in Singapore in the 1960s, the novel is about a discontented, listless, young Chinese English-educated clerk with 'only' an A-level certificate and no prospects, unable to marry the bargirl he loves or give up his dead-end job and escape to sea. He is finally trapped as the eldest son who becomes the family's sole breadwinner because of his father’s illness. His situation is counter-pointed with that of three former classmates, relatives and public housing neighbours who variously cope with life and make their way in post-colonial Singapore while he merely daydreams. Youthful dreams and idealism are seen to be affected by social, economic and cultural realities.

Abstract: 'Colin Tan is a Roman Catholic … who finds this … conflicting with his being homosexual. He is challenged by James, a fellow Roman Catholic - who finds this conflict non-existent - and seeks to find answers from Norbert, his confidant and priest, who is also gay and thus, struggles with his true convictions and the upholding of the Church’s doctrinal beliefs. The novella surfaces the dilemmatic pain of gay Christians and the impingement of societal expectations on closeted gays (and one can imagine its ugly rejection of non-closeted ones). It is a realistic piece which explores the stiflingly conservative and non-tolerant climate of Singapore towards the homosexual, and more so for the Christian one.' Abstract: A world-famous street is about to be demolished. An architect falls in love with a hawker. A star transvestite longs for a new life in a new body. Bugis Street - The Novel is a story of fate. Of how a place determines the destiny of the people who inhabit it. Of how a Singapore girl, Mei-li, returns after 20 years in Britain and America, in search of her family and her roots. She arrives in Bugis Street, the place of her childhood, but finds herself involved in its very destruction. Of how the values of different social classes, from gangsters to graduates, are reflected in a changing Singapore of the ‘60s and ‘80s. And of how the street’s transvestites seek acceptance in a hostile world. Told, in turn, in the individual voices of several characters, the novel relives the last days of a street, once the life of Singapore after dark, as it dies into memory.'  (Back cover).

   Abstract: 'Suwen faces molestation and betrayal, which drives her to paint a controversial picture, and to leave Singapore for the small Malaysian town where her dream of becoming an artist first took root. Nica defies her father in pursuing art rather than medicine. In her quest to be her own person, she chooses to live with her companion, and expresses herself through her paintings and sketches. Janice seeks a destiny rooted in Singapore, and in doing so, rejects her father’s firmly held beliefs and values. She leaves home to marry a Malay journalist, breaking away from her father’s influence. Through family histories, the novel weaves a rich tapestry which celebrates the multi-ethnicity of Singapore and the socio-political milieu of her early immigrants.' (Back cover).

Abstract: Based on student activism and events at the then University of Singapore campus in the 1970s. 'It was a thrusting world out there - each man for himself, striving, straining towards a full rice bowl. Hunger to be assuaged. Mouths to be kept busy. Fresh into university, Marie’s Group of Four, daring to be different, involve themselves with social issues, breaking away from their ivory tower establishment; and then, all too soon, being swept up in a cycle of events and a clash of personalities leaving them forever tangled. Rice Bowl is… about the complexity of living and loving in Singapore, drawing into its boundaries the little explored areas of human relationships, threading its way through those tentative awakening emotions which now lie raw and exposed.'    Abstract: ‘This quasi stream-of-consciousness novella is about an inward-looking, highly ambitious young man who aspires to be the richest man in Singapore. He is an offshoot of historical events which have shaped our island, and a product of his upbringing. His life is depicted in montage against changing rapid sequences of time. The protagonist, Benny Weng, himself sees it as a series of flashbacks replete with introspective thoughts. An anti-hero, he exerts a central unity in the narrative. In the end he seems to have found an alternative to his hectic life of money-making, but his life is never the same as before.’ (Back cover).

   Abstract: Set during World War II. The author states in his introduction that 'this book is a historical account of the siege of Singapore in a novel form and not a novel with historical background... The narrator is in fact a composite of Volunteers whose varied accounts I have blended together as those of a single person... Where the printed accounts do not tally exactly as to dates and events, I have made the decision myself. Some make-up to fill the gaps is inevitable and this is one of the cogent reasons why the form of the novel is used.' The narrator is one of a group of Volunteers, who believes the British claim that Singapore is impregnable and finds the swift British surrender incredible - like many of those who continued their round off parties, etc., even as the Japanese were advancing down the Malayan Peninsula.

Towkay Ong, head of one family, was so obsessed with amassing a fabulous fortune for himself that everything else didn’t matter. His eldest son could not avoid the shadow predicted by his fortune-telling Indian clerk. Banker Lai, head of the other family, had a liaison with an Englishwoman. His bastard son was never accepted by the white community in colonial Singapore. [W]hen war came to Singapore... [and] after the island’s capitulation Towkay Ong and Banker Lai became painfully aware that their lives lay in the hands of the victors. Extraordinary things often happen during times of uncertainty. Abstract: Set in China and Singapore during the mid-1920’s, in Britain during World War II (1939-1945) and in 1947 post-war Singapore. About three women: 'Ching-ling, the main character, recounts the… circumstances that had besieged her life and her mother’s. She was brought up in one of the many “death-houses” in Singapore’s Chinatown…. where superstitious Chinese sent their relatives to spend their last days since it was thought a person dying in a house brought misfortune to the occupants. This practice existed when Singapore was under British colonial rule, as did the owning of female slaves mostly from China, by wealthy Chinese families. Infanticide was at one time widespread… Females were considered “unlucky” and “burdens” to families. Those that were not killed were reared at “farms” operated by slave-traders. Girls were sold to flourishing brothels in Southeast Asia where they became slaves and the concubines of merchants, as happened to Ching-ling.’ (Back cover).

Abstract: 'From Penang to Perth, from Singapore to Shanghai, this novel is a string of eclectic stories interwoven into an imaginative tapestry. It is a subtle yet spicy combination of big-hearted romance, biting political satire and bittersweet melodrama. The protagonist is a twenty-something Malaysian working in Singapore. Between innocence and experience, he discovers life’s philosophical perspectives, cultural contradictions and poignant paradoxes.' (Back cover).

Abstract: 'An attack out at sea by hired killers swept Eric, a well-known singer, to the shores of Phuket after a heavy storm. Severely wounded, he was rescued by Viki, the daughter of a simple fisherman. Before help could reach him in time, a catastrophe killed Viki’s parents together with hundreds of others. Thrown together by the cruel twist of fate, the young couple weathered a myriad of personal and emotional storms and fell in love. All the while, danger lurked close behind, growing bolder and more desperate, threatening to destroy everything in its path.' Abstract: 'Wai Keong and Li had the perfect relationship - familiar, proper, safe. Until David steps in, overturning their carefully ordered worlds…. Claire Tham renders an uncommon love story from three points of view, pitting polished surfaces against painful depths, the comfort zone against alien space and the surrender to duty against the seduction of desire. Up close, the distinctions are no longer clear.' (Back cover).

Abstract: 'The Philippines is her home, but Singapore will always be part of her. For Singapore represents her first adventure; a tryst with uncertain destiny. From henceforth she will travel across many more seas but before the tide ebbs, she will return. Annabel leaves a sheltered life in her hometown of Cagayan and is swept onto the shores of Singapore, carrying with her hopes for a better life. Does she find wealth? Does she find contentment? Does she find love? This is a true-to-life story of loss, love and hope, centered on a woman of beauty, courage and strength.' (Back cover).

Abstract: 'The story of Sui, a hen that wakes up one morning to find her sister has been taken away to the marketplace. Shock and despair is followed by a resolve to save the eggs she is carrying… [A]n adventure story that captures the flavour of life in the kampong… It makes the reader look beyond the romanticism of the kampong to the bitter realities that must be faced in a world where life is short and the perils are many.' (Back cover).

Abstract: 'A new villain has taken hold of a nation and has hoodwinked the citizenry into a new tyrannical belief system. The people must fully adhere to its principles or be mocked publicly, condemned to death by a Natism court, and then beheaded before the masses. Natism demands total loyalty, including one's life. In light of the brutality the world faces today, The Visage of Terrorism - The Hounds of Hell presents the idea of terrorism as the worst form of barbarianism by military and quasi-military leaders, providing a landscape in which readers can see the best and worst of which man is capable. … [A] wide range of frightening scenarios and gripping plot twists … will cause readers to debate life as it is presently viewed and the ideas of extreme radicalism and intolerance of freedom.' Abstract: 'A group of Singaporeans holidaying in an exclusive island resort are captured by pirates, and held for ransom. The pirates split the captives into two groups, so that no one will attempt any kind of escape or rescue because they fear for the people in the other group. A slip by one of the pirates creates an opportunity for the Singaporeans in one camp to mount an escape. An ex-army regular takes that chance, and commits the whole group to a harrowing defence of their own lives, and the rescue of their friends and family in the other camp.' (Back cover).

Abstract: 'Tracey has always had life firmly under control. One of the top students in his junior college class, he has a beautiful girlfriend, Angie, and a loyal pal, Wai Mun. He has ambitious plans to start and head the World Affairs Society (WAS). But school has barely begun when Tracey’s control of his life begins slipping right through his confident hands. Small and plain, Valerie has never felt sure about anything in her life and hides behind a dispassionate facade. Only happy when she’s alone in her beloved West Coast Park, she does not intend her new class to be a highlight of her life. But Valerie’s about to meet someone who will change her life. Tracey and Valerie face the hurdles of setting up WAS and getting it going, the ’A’ level exams, doubts about themselves and their uncertain feelings for each other. With guidance from some nosy friends and a little divine intervention, life for the two of them can only get more complicated.’ (Back cover).

   Abstract: 'A period of violence and considerable unrest. Chinese middle school rioting, clashing political wills, ill-concealed racial bickering and the imminence of self government make Singapore in the 1950s a turbulent melting pot. Yet, Clarence de Sequiera, middle-aged Eurasian civil servant, has little attention for troubles of the wider world, being too distracted with his own problems. In one way or another, his relationships with wife and in-laws, his hardships at work in the PWD [Public Works Department], his mounting beer bills and his hazardous dodging of one, Arunachalam Chettiar, moneylender, all revolve around his inability to pay off the loan on a second-hand car. In a bid to raise money fast Clarence decides to play the four-digit lottery, the consuming passion of almost everyone, it seems. But Clarence doesn’t realise how high the stacks actually get till he finds himself sucked into the deadly undertones of this numbers game…' (Back cover).

Abstract: 'The author portrays herself as dead and lying in her coffin. During the three days before the final consignment, as friends, relatives, ex-colleagues, fans, lovers and total strangers come to pay their respects, she indulges, for the last time, her love of story-telling. Around each visitor she weaves a … tale’ which explores ‘human questions’ such as ‘Who are we?’, ‘Where did we come from?’, ‘What is the purpose of life?’, ‘What happens after death?’, ‘Why are we here at all?’, ‘What is our conception of god in an age of undisputed scientific power?’, ‘How should we view good and evil, pain and suffering?’, ‘Is there such a thing as Ultimate Truth?’, ‘What does it mean to be human?’” (Back cover).
Contents: Instead of single stories with titles, this collection contains 27 untitled “chapters” each consisting of a fictional or semi-fictional “story” based on thoughts, observations and memories of the “dead” author as she lies in her coffin. The 28th and last, enigmatically has only one word, “God?”

420. Manzur, S. Dying to marry & other stories. Singapore: Asiapac Books, 2007. 167 p. Notes: The author won an award at the Golden Point Awards Short Story Writing Contest, 2001. Call No.: RSING S823 MAN Abstract: The stories are about how ‘emotions such as love, compassion, hatred, envy, sorrow, fear, greed and lust influence our decisions and actions, and thus govern our lives and character.’ (Back cover).

421. Modder, Ralph [Ralph P. Modder]. Curse of the pontianak. Singapore: Horizon Books, 2004. 140 p. Notes: The author (b. 1923) is a journalist in Singapore. Call No.: RSING S823 MOD Abstract: ‘While the West has been inundated with stories and movies about blood-sucking vampires, werewolves, zombies and evil monsters… little has been heard of a seductive, half-human female demon - the pontianak - that for a thousand years or more has caused more terror among the millions of inhabitants of Malaysia and Indonesia than any other evil spirit. These “beautiful killers from hell”… are said to be the spirits of women who had died in childbirth and were jealous of pregnant women whom they killed. They appeared as large birds with grotesque women’s faces, long tresses covering their black feathers and had sharp claws. The stories presented in this book were mostly passed down by word-of-mouth over a period of time and the characters’ names are fictional.’ (Horizon Books).

422. Modder, Ralph [Ralph P. Modder]. (Comp. & Ed.). A getai singer’s love affair with a ghost and other true ‘hungry ghost’ stories. Singapore: Horizon Books, 2007. x, 122 p. Notes: The author (b. 1923) is a journalist in Singapore. Call No.: RSING S823 GET Abstract: ‘Each year, from the last day of the 6th Lunar Month until the end of the 7th Lunar Month, the souls in hell come to Earth to feast at the Festival of the Hungry Ghosts. They rewarded those who were kind to them while they were alive and took revenge on those who had treated them unkindly. The…
Festival … is celebrated by the Taoists and Buddhists and is attended by spirits who were being punished in hell for crimes they had committed when they were alive. They were permitted to attend the Festival because of their “good conduct” and appeals made to Yen Lo Wang, the Lord of the Underworld, by family members for their temporary release. Some unruly ghosts refused to return to hell at the end of the Festival. They threatened to bring bad luck and even death to those who refused to hide them from Hell Guards who had been sent to arrest them. Some ghosts forced women into having love affairs. The first Festival was in the Liang dynasty (AD 502-556) when Emperor Wu was told in a dream that he had to feed the starving souls in hell with feast in the 7th Lunar Month.’ (Back cover).

Contents: Introduction; A soul’s 49-day journey to hell; Revenge!; A getai’s love affair with a ghost; Dead man talking!; The undying love of Wai Leng; The haunting of Thomas Yang; A long-awaited reunion; My dog’s ghost rescued me!; The otak-otak mystery; Terror of the karang-guni man.

Abstract: These stories ‘portray the scandalous, tragic, violent, romantic and lighter sides of life at various levels of the segregated English and Asian communities in Malaya (now Malaysia) and Singapore under British colonial rule from the founding of Singapore in 1819 by Sir Thomas Stamford Raffles of the British East India Company till the end of World War II in 1945. The stories originated from various sources and were passed on by word-of-mouth or recalled from memory and jotted down over a period of several years. While many were “lost in time,” others may have found their way into Far Eastern stories by Somerset Maugham and Joseph Conrad.’ (Back cover).

446. Poon, Wena. Lions in winter: stories. Petaling Jaya, Selangor: MPH Pub., 2007. 209 p. Notes: Some of the stories were previously published elsewhere. Call No.: RSING S823 POO Abstract: 'Poon examines the quiet lives of displaced Singaporeans living abroad and those in Singapore who are often torn between two worlds in their search for an imaginary homeland. The model student who breaks his parents’ hearts when he drops out of medical school to study fashion design in London. The shampoo girl who leaves Singapore for the hustle and bustle of New York’s Chinatown. The schoolteacher whose anxiety about white people cripples his dream retirement in Toronto. The mother who dreams of an old world amidst the changing landscapes of Singapore, and an unlikely Singaporean family in Nevada cut off from the rest of the world by an obsessive patriarch. Poon’s portraits of various lives share a common, constant yearning to belong in a place made foreign whether by time or space… individuals who form part of the kaleidoscopic yet wistful modern history of Asian migration.' (Back cover). Contents: Kenny's big break; The man who was afraid of ATMs; Those who service, those who do not; Addiction; Lions in winter; Dog hot pot; The shooting ranch; The move; The toys; The hair-washing girl; Mrs Chan's wedding day.

Abstract: ‘Claire Tham’s rebels tease us with the most provocative questions. Such as… Was Hitler the first rock star? Is College Spirit a big con-game? Who needs school uniforms? Most important of all, are all teachers fascists?…’
Chris, the angry college punk; Lee, the deejay's Americanised daughter; James, the pretender; Patsy, the disoriented freshman; Jeanne, the alienated wife; the Tiananmen refugee and many more… The angry rebels who walk through Claire Tham's stories are disturbingly familiar. Bitterly, eloquently, they voice our own hidden rebellion.' (Back cover).

   Abstract: "Set in 1999, after a decade of the People’s Action Party’s "kinder and gentler Singapore", a daring playwright/director stages a play which is highly critical of the Government’s policy on dissent. The playwright is called in for an interview with the Internal Security Department, and disappears. The play’s title, Half century, refers to the characters who were born in the ’50s, and the play is a story of generation and politics." (Hannah Pandian, The Straits Times, 5 December, 1992.)

Abstract: 'Stella Kon uses futuristic settings to [comment on] attitudes towards having babies. In “Z is for zygote”, people are not permitted to have children unless they have sufficient entitlement points. These “Z-points” are in such demand that when an elderly doctor is awarded two extra “couple” points, women start fighting one another to become his partner in procreation. In “To hatch a swan”, wealthy ladies don't want to be bothered with the discomfort and inconvenience of pregnancy, delivery and baby care. Instead they hire lowly brood-nurses to be surrogate mothers to their children.' (Back cover).

Notes: Photocopy of play sold by The Necessary Stage at performance venue. Directed by Natalie Hennedige. Devised by Paerin Choa, Serena Ho, Rodney Oliveira, Patricia Mok and T. T Dhavamanni. Has a different ending from original play. This ‘performance is an adaptation of Lanterns never go out which [Sharma] first wrote in 1989. The play has been staged several times in different versions. [This] version was titled Lanterns because it was an adaptation. It was presented as part of TNS’ M1 Youth Connection, staged at the NUS Cultural Centre. It has not been restaged anywhere else.’ (Personal communication by the playwright to Koh Tai Ann, 12 September, 2008). Call No.: No holdings in NL or NUS Central Library currently.

Abstract: 'Lanterns centres on an 18-year old girl, Kah Wei. She lives with her mother and brother in an HDB flat. She is well provided for and everything at home is good. But Kah Wei is not happy. In fact, she hates living at home and wants to move out. She'll scream and shout, stomp her feet and terrorise everyone until she gets what she wants. And she doesn’t care what you think. And if you think that’s bad, brace yourself cos there'll be other teenagers with even worse behaviour. Repulsive, horrid, spoilt attitudes will be displayed at every turn as the main story line is interrupted by talk shows and interviews.’ (Synopsis, p. 3).

Abstract: ‘In Are You There, Singapore? Singaporean innocents abroad savour the freedom of living, studying and playing in London, a city then charged with the political activism of anti-Vietnam War demonstrations, Amnesty International’s campaign for political prisoners, and the exercise of sexual freedom. Ang Siew Hua, a fresh undergraduate, becomes pregnant after a fling with an Italian student, and spends time agonising over abortion or pregnancy. She is supported in the latter option by her friends and her brother, Ang Siew Chye, a law student, who introduces her to Reginald Fernandez, another law student, who falls for her. Whatever attempt this play makes at political consciousness gives way to the personal. Yeo’s students are too absorbed with finding themselves, too exhilarated by a freewheeling expatriate environment, to be sustained long distance, by Singaporean politics.' (Leong Liew Geok, The Straits Times, 14 July, 2001)

Notes: Photocopy of the typescript. The play was staged by the National University of Singapore Society at the Victoria Theatre from 9 - 12 January, 1992.

Abstract: ‘In The Eye Of History, Mr Lee Kuan Yew is confronted… with a man who loved Singapore as much as he himself does – Sir Stamford Raffles. At one point, Raffles is passionately angry about the demolition of the old Raffles Institution on Bras Basah Road. He questions Mr Lee on the changing landscape of Singapore. But Mr Lee is just as passionate about making way for the new. Nothing should stand in the way of progress, he points out. The play asks: Which man’s passion is right?’ (Hannah Pandian, The Straits Times, 16 December, 1991).

Call No.: RSING S822 YEO
Contents: Introduction by K.K.Seet and Chitra Sankaran, and an interview with the playwright by Ban Kah Choon. Plays: “Are you there – Singapore?”; “One year back home”; “Changi”. The last play, “Changi”, continues from where “One year back home” left off. Fernandez denies under interrogation, his alleged pro-Communist sympathies and goes on a hunger strike. But he allows both Hua and Chye, to persuade him to accept, for the sake of his parents, the government’s terms for his freedom: a televised ‘confessional’ interview and abstention from political activity. Self-exiled in London, Fernandez returns on the death of his father, then breaks his word by addressing a political rally. In a final confrontation, Chye tries to harness his political animus by inviting him to join the PAP [People’s Action Party].’ (Leong Liew Geok, The Straits Times, 14 July, 2001).

Notes: Foreword by Craig Lucas and introduction by David Román. Born in Singapore in 1965, US-based Chay Yew is better known as an Asian-American playwright and director. But it was upon returning in 1988 that his first play, “As if he hears”, was commissioned by TheatreWorks. About a heterosexual businessman who contracts HIV on a trip to Thailand and is helped by a gay Malaysian social worker, the play was censored in Singapore and had to be re-written. Chay Yew’s plays set in the Southeast Asian region include “Malaya” (2003) and “A distant shore” (2005).

Call No.: PL 822.54 YEW

Abstract: "In this collection of four new plays, Yew continues to explore issues of artistic expression, self-identity, and the immigrant experience. In "Red", a magical, mysterious drama set during China’s Cultural Revolution, a renowned actor stands his ground against a young revolutionary in a struggle that pits politics against free expression and one generation against another. Set in New York’s Chinatown, Scissors is a moving portrait of a weekly haircutting ritual between an elderly Chinese manservant and his Caucasian ex-employer. "A beautiful country” chronicles the turbulent history of Asians in America through the eyes of an immigrant drag queen, Miss Visa Denied. In “Wonderland”, a family working toward their American dream experiences dramatic and unexpected developments that threaten to shatter their hopes."

Notes: "Porcelain” when staged at the Royal Court Theatre in London, won the London Fringe Award for Best Play in 1992. It was staged by Toy Factory Theatre Ensemble in Singapore at the Esplanade Theatre on 7 – 10 April and 12 – 17 April, 2005, directed by Beatrice Chia and Goh Boon Teck. Ong Keng Sen directed "A language of their own” at the Joseph Papp Public Theater in New York City in 1995, but could not get a licence to stage the play in Singapore.

Call No.: PL 822 YEW

Abstract: "'Porcelain’(1992)... John Lee, a 19-year-old Chinese student, shoots his working-class Caucasian lover in the same lavatory where they had first met and began their sexual relationship. Lee is caught in a classic double-bind as a gay Anglo-Asian seeking a sense of belonging in London: he is marginalized or ignored by English gay men and his tradition-bound family would disown him if he came out to them. Desperate for acceptance and love, he clings to the sexual connection with his casual lover as his salvation and tries to force it into something more permanent. When the lover retreats from any real commitment, John Lee’s desperation turns to murderous rage. ‘A Language of their Own” revolves around the doomed affair of Ming, an assimilated Chinese-American and his Chinese-born lover, Oscar who is older and HIV-positive. The play explores the difficulties of love between people who are multiply marginalized. In the process, it also criticizes gay culture’s privileging of youth and beauty.’ (glbtq: an encyclopaedia of gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender & queer culture. http://www.glbtq.com/literature/yew_chay_lit.html. Call No.: RDET 828.995957 SEN
Abstract: ‘...48 poems arranged in five sections. Each section reflects the pupils’ response to one area of thought and feeling. The first section is on “Patriotism”. The second, “Listen Heart”, contains poems written in response to music stimulus from Smetana’s The Moldau. The third, [“Schooldays”] pours forth the frustrations and exultations of a school child. “Down the Corridors” mirrors our pupils’ thoughts and aspirations. The final section is called “Strength” because it contains the most depth and feelings. It ends on an optimistic call for youthful exuberance and good cheer.’ (Foreword).

Notes: The series began under this title and continued for 3 issues. The Editor of each volume varies. The title of the series was shortened to Silverfish new writing from no. 4 and the publisher has retrospectively omitted the subtitle in its catalogue listing. In September, 2000, Silverfish Books wondering ‘[w]hat was the state of English writing in Malaysia?’ circulated an email inviting ‘submissions for Silverfish New Writing I.... ’ [S]tarted off as one involving short stories from Malaysia only, Singapore was later included because of the common historical and cultural background (and baggage). But this being the Internet age, the project refused to be contained. So, while most of the stories are from Malaysia and Singapore, there is a sprinkling from beyond. This is a snapshot of current writing in English - or postcolonial writing (for want of a better term) - in English from Malaysia, Singapore and beyond. 1147. Argot. Singapore: NUS Literary Society, 2008 –
Call No.: No holdings in NL. (Available in NUS Central Library.)
Abstract: ‘Argot is a biannual magazine based in Singapore featuring poetry, fiction and the occasional article or interview. Its content is weighted towards, but not limited to local writers and young writers (and especially writers who are both). The magazine … is the successor to Focus, a magazine previously published by the Society. That publication was established in 1961 and, like Argot, carried quality writing from the NUS student body and beyond.’ (NUS Literary Society website).

Notes: Succeeded by New cauldron. The October 1949 issue is titled The cauldron omnibus.
Library Holdings: The NUS Central Library has 1947-1949 in print and on microfilm.
Call No.: No holdings in NL. (Available in NUS Central Library.)

1149. Commentary. Singapore: University of Singapore Society, 1968 - Notes: In 1980, the University of Singapore Society became the National University of Singapore Society (NUSS) and Commentary its official journal. Originally ‘a University of Singapore Society Publication’, its founding editor was S. Jayakumar, with ‘Associates’ Arun Senkattuvan, Chandran Nair, Ernest Wong, Kwa Chong Guan and S. Rajendran. The first series ran from vol. 1, no. 1 (Aug 1968) - vol. 4, no. 1 (Sep 1971). This was followed by a New Series: no.1 (Aug 1972) - no.8 (Mar/Apr 1974) and then a New Issue: vol.1, no.1 (Aug 1975) - vol. 9, no. 1 & 2 (Nov 1991). vol. 5, no. 1 (Oct 1981) was the first issue published by NUSS. From vol. 10 (1992) - vol. 19 (2003), Commentary was published annually as thematic issues. There is no official vol. 12 (1994) on the theme, “Looking at Culture” as the NUSS Publications Committee suppressed that issue for fear of potentially “offending” content. It was subsequently privately published as a book under the title, Looking at culture (Singapore: Artres Design & Communications, 1996; 182p.) in the same format as Commentary vol. 10 and vol.11. The next Commentary which appeared after it was vol. 13 (1996) in a different format. vol. 17 and vol. 19 are “Retrospectives” of past issues, respectively 1985-2000 and 1968-1984. The periodical has not appeared since vol. 19 (2003), but is not defunct, as the next issue, with Edwin Thumboo as editor, is in preparation. (Personal communication from Thumboo, August 2008).

Library Holdings: NL and the NUS Central Library holdings for the period 1968 – 2003 are uneven and contain gaps.

Call No.: RSING/RDET/RCLOS/RU 300.5 C

Abstract: The content of Commentary has largely followed its founding editorial committee’s aims: that it is ‘motivated chiefly by the hope that it will serve as a forum for interesting views on contemporary issues …[relating] to Singapore affairs… The Society strongly feels there are many problems and issues in our society which require mature attention and analysis and there are individuals who have points of view to express but do not do so for lack of suitable media. Commentary will not be partisan politically and will seek to present a balanced selection of views.’ (vol. 1, no. 1, Aug 1968).

Notes: Succeeded by Argot (2008 - ). Focus went online from 1997-2000 with no print edition. The publisher varies – Literary Society: Department of English, University of Malaya in Singapore (1961); University of Singapore (1962-79); Department of English Language and Literature, National University of Singapore (1980 - 2000). The editor and editorial board, like the Literary Society Committee, changed with each new Academic Year (AY). Two to three issues appeared each AY from vol. 1 to vol. 5, no. 1 (1961- 1966/7) but from AY 1966/67 only one issue has appeared annually. This series was followed by a “New Series” appearing annually: No. 1 - 8 (1967/8 to Jan. 1976). After a gap, the 'present series was revived in 1979' from which time each annual issue was named after the year, ie, Focus 1979 to the present. Focus 1983 is the ’21st Anniversary Commemorative Issue.’ The print edition ceased in 1996 when the magazine went online at http://www.nus.edu.sg/Publ/focus/LitSoc/index.html It ceased to be hosted by NUS after 2000 and the contents are no longer available. Up to AY 2003/04, Focus was hosted at paid or temporary websites and the contents are also no longer available. From 2005-06, the Literary Society collaborated with the NUS Theatre Studies and Arts Club to produce Issues, an online newsletter. In 2007, the Literary Society replaced Focus with Argot. Both print and online edition were launched in March, 2008. See http://literarysociety.wordpress.com/magazine/ (Accessed 26 August, 2008.) Post-1996 information provided by Dr. Gwee Li Sui, Adviser to the Literary Society since AY2003/04.
Call number: RSING/RCLOS 828.995957 F
Abstract: In the early years, Focus published poems, short stories, critical essays and reviews from university students, lecturers, visitors and so on. Among them were D J Enright, Robert Conquest, Richard Hoggart, Paul Theroux, Edwin Thumboo, Arthur Yap, Robert Yeo, Lee Tzu Pheng, Masuri, S.N, Ee Tiang Hong, Muhammed Haji Salleh, K. S. Maniam and other undergraduate and beginner writers or poets. Essays and reviews declined in number over the years. From the 1980s, the magazine comprised winning entries of the Literary Society’s annual creative writing competition.

Notes: Editors: Felix Cheong, Kelvin Tan, Jonathan Teo. The Introduction mentions the "demise of the original Hardpressed," but there are no local library holdings of "the original Hardpressed." The "Acknowledgements" page describes this as an 'experimental first issue' and there is no library record of any subsequent issue(s). The Introduction also states that the "new Hardpressed" differs from the old one in a few aspects. ‘... Hardpressed is now entirely in the hands of students ... [and] is now devoted to creative writing and criticism' and will not 'publish news articles. Instead, to encourage readers' participation, [it welcomes] not only poetry, short-stories, short plays (or extracts) but also readers' criticisms [sic]... Readers outside the University are also welcome to contribute.'

http://www.the2ndrule.com (Accessed 16 September, 2008.)

Notes: ‘The original homegrown counter-culture e-zine’ started by Alfian Saat, Koh Beng Liang, et al.. Its website explains ‘what is/the2ndrule?’ in ‘four words: urban creative guerrilla magazine. … We send our magazine each month through email to the inboxes of our readers. … We operate guerrilla style, using minimal resources for maximum effect.’ The name the2ndrule is ‘taken from the movie “Fight Club”. The character Tyler Durden (Brad Pitt) announces these ground rules before every session of Fight Club, an underground no holds barred boxing meet, which is a return to primordial instincts for disgruntled urban workers: “…the first rule of fight club is you do not talk about fight club. the second rule of fight club is you do not talk about fight club…” We named the magazine the2ndrule because we want it to be the creative equivalent of a fight club. Without the violence and destructiveness, of course.’ Its website claims it has “6000 readers”. According to a notice dated May 26, 2008, ‘the2ndrule is no longer being updated until further notice – Ben.’ This was posted on its last published issue – number 58, dated March -April, 2006, guest-edited by ’Joselyn Sim, Lecturer, LASALLE-SIA, College of The Arts.’

Content and Objectives: Its ‘purpose’ is to ‘[move] people from apathy to action.’ The2ndrule aims to encompass all forms of creative writing including graphic design animation, short films and interactive media, in order that technology may be used to communicate to its fullest potential.

Content and Objectives: Poetry Billboard was ‘started as a showcase of new poetry.’ “Poems” archives all contributions; there is an “Editor’s Pick” of the poems; “The Poets” lists all contributors; “Related Resources” points readers to essays, articles and other literary websites, “Your Voice” invites readers’ comments.

1201. QLRS: Quarterly Literary Review Singapore

Notes: Singapore’s first formal online literary journal, QLRS was founded by poet, Toh Hsien Min, its current Chief Editor. The Editorial Committee and individual areas of responsibilities are as follows: (Chief/Poetry); Toh Hsien Min; Short Stories: Yeow Kai Chai; Essays: Zhang Ruihe; Criticism: Elaine Foo and Ng Wei Chian; Interviews: Elaine Foo; Extra Media: Cyril Wong and Ng Wei Chian; The Acid Tongue: Cyril Wong. The QLRS forum currently consists of over 100 members who contribute to discussions on various current and other issues.
Content and Objectives: QLRS aims to promote the literary arts in Singapore, to stimulate feedback from and discussion among writers, literary critics and readers. It 'believe[s] that good writing can and will emerge in Singapore, and ... aim[s] to aid that process by applying rigorous critical and editorial criteria.' Its 'standards are therefore high' and its 'paradigms are the TLSes [Times Literary Supplement] and LRBs [London Review of Books] of this world.' QLRS publishes poetry, short stories, essays, literary criticism and interviews. Although its focus is mainly Singaporean writing, the journal accepts submissions from Singaporean and non-Singaporeans alike.

1202. Slope
http://www.slope.org  (Accessed 16 September, 2008.)
Notes: Slope editors review entries for poetry anonymously and accepts entries in September only. Founded by Ethan Paquin, each issue, featuring new poetry and criticism, has different editors. As of September, 2008, it has published issue number 25. Previous issues are all archived. It occasionally features "samplers" of new poetry from different countries. Slope 15 (Spring & Summer, 2002) featured a 'new Singapore poetry sampler' with poems edited with an Introduction, "'Some Mimicry of Foreign Birds': Language and Voice in Singaporean Poetry in English", by Felix Cheong. The poems were by Alvin Pang, Eddie Tay, Paul Tan, Gilbert Koh, Cyril Wong, Megan Ng, Heng Siok Tian, Aaron Lee, Khoo Peng-Ean and Qian Xi Teng. It also featured 'paintings by Hong Sek Chern.'

1203. Softblow
Notes: Softblow was founded by Cyril Wong. The editors are Christopher Ujine Ong and Jason Wee. Archival evidence indicates it started in September, 2004 and to date is current up to May, 2008. It states it is 'ad free. We do not get paid for doing this. Poets will not be paid for having their works featured here. This journal will be updated on the 1st of every month.' Each issue features an editorial and distinctive 'art work' of a featured artist/designer which includes the 'cover page.' Contributors are both international and Singaporean, the latter including several of Singapore's well-known published poets.
Content and Objectives: Softblow aims to discover and feature exceptional poetry and to specifically promote the reading of poetry. It mainly accepts poems, but only prose 'that defies categorizing' which 'falls under poetry.' The work of 'featured poets' and artists is stored in an indexed "Archive."

1204. Verbosity
http://www.verbosity.net/index2.html  (Accessed 16 September, 2008.)
Notes: (Alf’s) Verbosity (as it is also titled on the website) is published by the poet, Alvin Pang. In a “message to the reader” dated 1 January,1999, Pang states "If you are reading this you are probably out-of-bounds. This is a private archive of draft works intended for the author’s reference and access. It is neither intended for publication nor should it be considered as such.' It's earliest posting was in 1994 and its last in 2007.
Content and Objectives: Pang posts his poems, and other writings under self-explanatory sections titled "Creative", "Columns", "Reviews", "Essays" and "Reflections."
The four main Singaporean sources with information about writers are the Singapore Infopedia of the National Library; A Database of Singapore Writers maintained by the National Book Development Council of Singapore (Book Council); The Singapore (ASEAN) Committee on Culture and Information (COCI) which has a list of “Singapore’s Writers” and The Literature, Culture and Society of Singapore pages of the Postcolonial Literature Web maintained by the University Scholars Programme (USP) at the National University of Singapore.

Information about an author may be found on one website only or could be found on all four. More often than not, the information is not up to date, depending on when it was entered. The fullest information will be found in the Singapore Infopedia; the COCI’s list is necessarily select and includes writers in Singapore’s other official languages; most writers appear in the Book Council’s A Database of Singapore Writers—but in the seeming absence of editorial guidelines, the extent and kind of information given is inconsistent, while the USP list is still in the process of being built and could also be inconsistent.

These are not the sole internet sources, of course and only authors found on these sites are listed here. A search will discover the personal websites of some authors, while biographical information of yet others (eg. Minfong Ho) can also be found on sites such as that of The Authors Guild: http://members.authorsguild.net/minfong/bio.htm and so on. (Websites mentioned were all accessed on 21 September, 2008).
