COMMUNICATION EDUCATION IN THE
INTERNATIONAL ISLAMIC UNIVERSITY, MALAYSIA (IIUM) :
RESPONDING TO MEDIA NEEDS IN THE MUSLIM WORLD

YUSUF HUSSAIN *
S.SHAUKAT ALI **

INTRODUCTION

The International Islamic University, Malaysia was established in 1983 in order to materialize the aspirations and hopes of the Muslim Ummah (World Muslim Community) expressed in the First World Conference on Muslim Education held in Makkah al-Mukarramah, 1977. In this sense, IIUM is a unique centre of learning where knowledge is regarded as a trust from the creator of earths and heavens - the Almighty Allah (swt). The basic philosophy of this institution can best be translated in the words of its President, Dato’ Sri Anwar Ibrahim, "The International Islamic University, Malaysia is founded upon a renewed awareness of the perennial value of the teachings of the Qur’an and Sunnah and is dedicated to the re-orientation of the Ummah and Mankind."

The University, consequently, stands for a holistic approach in which revealed knowledge (ma’arif al wahy) plays a dynamic role in the development and production of knowledge based on the Islamic values. The University regards this exercise, the quest for Islamized Knowledge which encompasses both professional and ethical excellence in various fields of human life.

At present, the University offers 13 programmes of study leading to the degrees of Bachelor of Human Sciences, such as Communication, Arabic Language and Literature, English Language and Literature, History and Civilization, Islamic Revealed Knowledge and Heritage, Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology and Sociology and Anthropology, Business Administration, Economics and Laws. It also offers programmes leading to the Bachelor's degrees in Business Administration, Economics, Laws, Engineering in Computer and Information Systems and Engineering in Mechatronics. Apart from the Bachelor's degree programmes, IIUM offers postgraduate and professional degree programmes in 13 different Social Science areas.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMUNICATION

The Department of Communication was established on the 1st of July 1990 as one of the departments in the Kulliyyah (Faculty) of the Islamic Revealed Knowledge and Human Sciences.

The establishment of the Department of Communication in the IIUM was an outcome of the realization that communication plays a vital role in the life of the Muslims. The Holy Qur'an specifically states that Muslims are the best nation ever evolved and that we are enjoined to invite "to ma'aruf and forbid munkar." To play this role effectively, the Ummah has to equip themselves with the knowledge as well as to master the skills and technology of modern communication.
OBJECTIVES OF THE DEPARTMENT

The Department has six objectives

1. To produce communication professionals who are endowed with iman and taqwa, committed to the Islamic way of life; knowledgeable in communication concepts, principles and theories; skillful in utilizing various communication technologies; and able and willing to infuse Islamic values in media and other professional organizations.

2. To produce graduates who have a sound academic and professional groundings to pursue specialized study at the post graduate level.

3. To conduct research in different areas relevant to the field of communication.

4. To provide consultancy services in communication training, research and media production.

5. To produce audio-visual and video materials to support teaching, training and da‘wah work.

6. To conduct short courses and in-service training in Communication.
THE MUSLIM WORLD

The Muslim world consists of forty eight countries where Muslims form the majority of the population. These countries stretch from Morocco to Indonesia. All are members of the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC).

The number of Muslims is estimated to be more than 1.5 billion. Two third of them live in OIC countries and about one third live countries where Muslims are minorities.

The Muslims belong to about 300 ethnic groups speaking diverse languages. The largest ethnic groups are the Arabs, numbering about 135 millions. There are also the Indonesians, the Pakistanis, the Turks, the Iranians, the Kurds, the Hausan, and the Berbers. All are bound by their faith in Allah, the one and only God.

MEDIA IN THE MUSLIM WORLD

The Muslim world today posses their own media which provide both information and entertainment. In all the OIC countries the Government is directly or indirectly in control of the media, both electronic and print.
Media ownership is comparatively low, especially for print media. Television ownership is confined to the middle class and to people living in cities and towns. Only radio ownership is widespread.

The media in the OIC countries share the following characteristics:

1. Dependence on the West for its news and information needs as well as for its entertainment programs.
2. Sensational reportings on sex, rapes and obscenities.
3. Bias reportings on the Islamic movements opposing the ruling powers.
4. Lack of reportings on science, technology and commerce.
5. Lack of quality articles, features and programs on Islam.
6. Lack of quality reportings championing the poor and the disadvantaged groups.
8. Glorification of expensive and high-class life styles.
10. Lack of quality editorials championing the mission of Islam.
THE MEDIA NEEDS

The media needs of OIC countries could be summed up as follows:

1. The need to free itself from over dependence on Western news sources.
2. The need to free itself from dependence on Western television programs.
3. The need to free itself from Western values and media ethics.
4. The need to free itself from Western concepts of news values.
5. The need to free itself from Western concepts of a good advertisement.
6. The need for publishers and editors to free themselves from fear of antagonising the West when championing the Islamic cause.
7. The need to provide relevant and useful information and entertainment to the readers, listeners and viewers.

RESPONDING TO MEDIA NEEDS

In developing the academic program of the Department we give serious consideration to the media needs of Islamic countries. At present the University admits students from all over the Islamic world including countries such as the United States, Russia, Britain, China and Australia where Muslims form the minority.
The Muslim countries has been following the Western trends, even if they are not consistent to their value systems. We felt that influx of indecent communication contents via powerful waves, beams and screens, have also proven successful in shaping individual behaviour patterns and in affecting traditional cultural setups. Within the media and information rich nations, the issues of obscenity, distrust, pornography, fabrication of truth, cultural invasion, disinformation, and the issue of freedom and responsibility have become the growing concerns. In such a situation, to our view mankind needs to look into the phenomenon with a new approach in order to change the "self-serving" communication order into a "human-serving" communication system. But what would be the starting point? The starting point lies in the commitment and understanding that human beings are not the economic beings. Human being in nature are ethical being- are good and have worth and occupy a unique position and status in the whole system of creation. And all communication systems and processes are the outcome of human communicative ability.

The Department offers specialization in three areas i.e. Print Media, Public Relations and Organizational Communication. Students may also opt to take a general, non-specialised degree in communication.

PRACTICUM

It is important to note at this point that undergraduate students specializing in Print Media, Public Relations and Organizational Communication are required to work with and are inducted into the relevant organization for a period of 2 months, usually during the last two semesters.
During this period of internship training, students get familiar with the working of their respective field and also learn practical know how in the profession. Apart from the internship training, the same students are also required to publish their own magazine as house journal which include at least basic understanding of how to write and publish material in the areas of their specialization. For this purpose, the students have a complete computer lab.... they use for computer skills including composing and page-making of their own magazine.

EVALUATION

The first batch of our students (29 in number) graduated on 21st August 1994. Therefore it is too early to evaluate the success of our programs in producing skill media practioners of "taqwa". However reports from the media organizations that employed them are very encouraging.

FUTURE PLANS

The Department intends to include Photo Journalism, Advertising and the Electronic Media as areas of specialization within next two to three academic years. Home work in this direction has already been done.
CONCLUSION

In order to respond to the media needs in the Muslim world, Department of Communication, IIUM was established under the concept that all communication systems and processes are basically the outcome of human communicating ability. Communication media are only the carriers of what an individual or a group of people perceives, produces, transmits, and receives. To our view, existing communication system and contents are heavily influenced by the secular and crude materialistic views of life. Moreover, prolonged socio-cultural, political, economic and technological suppression has made the Muslims passive followers of the alien secular intellectual culture. Islam is basically different from the secular materialistic civilization, which certainly dominates the present-day world. The two are completely varied in their description and purpose of human life as well as in the fundamentals on which they base such description. Contrary to the crude materialistic secular views, the basic subject of revealed is man, not the machine.

The Department of Communication was established in the same conceptual framework to produce communication professionals who could exert their abilities not only as good professionals but also as God-fearing self-responsible excellent professionals. Its academic and non-academic programmes are also framed with the same view.
