"Health Education Needs the Media"

June 20 - 22, 1984
Singapore
Goals and Objectives

The past decade has seen the growth of a significant global core of experience involving a more systematic approach to mass media promotion of public health and nutrition. While there are limitations to what the media can do, it still remains a potent weapon for changing the people's knowledge, behaviour and attitudes towards health. This Roundtable on "Health Education Needs the Media" is the first of a series of training activities that will be conducted in the ASEAN region. These activities are aimed at increasing the capabilities of ASEAN countries to promote health and nutrition. The end result will hopefully be the attainment of the global community's goal of "Health for All by the Year 2000."

This series of training activities will bring together senior media personnel, information decision-makers, and health and nutrition experts. The participants will be sensitised to the dimensions of the health and nutrition problems in the region and will hopefully reinforce their sense of social responsibility.

After this Singapore Roundtable, six national-level projects – one in each of the ASEAN countries – will be implemented. These national workshops will train media production and creative specialists in the techniques of health and nutrition promotion.

The final phase of this series of training activities will be the development of a large-scale project aimed at strengthening the institutional capacity of the media to promote public health worldwide.
